MADNESS

The tragic journey of the emerald eyed woman.

Ebrahim Saho
Chapter One

Many years ago in a hot evening of 1974, there was a Spanish woman named Layla. She was a beautiful woman with long black curly shining hair and jade-green eyes, she was a joyful person, the kind of person that no matter how sad or angry you were she would draw a smile on your face.

One day her mother sent her to buy some bread and lemonade at Mario’s the most popular grocery shop in the village. On the way to the shop, a guy was on the side of the street, he was Alfred the typical thug that was rude and ugly and was always thinking he was “the strongest”. As soon as he sees Layla he started walking towards her and she exclaimed ”Don’t waste my time Alfred I have better issues to do than being here staring at you trying to flirt with me” and he replied “My beautiful emerald eyed panther”, ”when did I become yours Alfred? Leave me alone, I am tired of listening to you every single day when I go to do some errands”-she snapped. Alfred got very angry and he turned back and he whispered- “Layla you will regret humiliating me I swear . He went straight to Layla’s house and he angrily stabbed her father 5 times like he wasn’t even human. When he was done stabbing Layla’s father her mother came in and shouted-“noooo! “My love what happened to you?! ” And before she could react Alfred came out from behind the curtain and he stabbed her on the back 3 times and she fell on the floor bleeding and dying instantly, with the spilled blood from that atrocious cold blooded murder. Alfred wrote on the wall “Layla I couldn’t get into your heart nor your head but now you will never forget my name”, and he ran away forever. Layla was going back home with a shining smile on her face, she leapt into the house and suddenly that smile and that happy face turned into a desperate face with calamity tears on it. She was crying desperately so confused and then she noticed the message on the wall. Afterwards, Layla ran to the police station and told them about the disastrous situation that happened. After 3 months of searching for the murderer of Layla’s parents, the officers got tired and they ended up forgetting about that case.

Layla suffered like no one could imagine since the day her parents died. After a couple of months she travelled all the way to England because she wanted a fresh start in a new place where she could stop thinking of the tragic things that happened to her in Spain. After the long journey she finally arrived in England and she found a proper job and rented a beautiful house, her boss John really appreciated her work, one day he invited her to his house for dinner after the dinner she happily went home. When she was about to sleep the police broke into her house and they handcuffed her. She was accused of murder, the murder of her boss which was a crime she didn’t commit.

They didn’t have any solid evidence but she went to trial and she was charged for murder and the judge gave her 30 years. In prison they bullied her so much that sometimes she thought about escaping but at the end she always ended forgetting about it.

Chapter Two

Sooner or later it had to come, finally she was 50 years and it was time to be free, when the warden told her that she was getting out she cried madly until she couldn’t cry any more.

“I curse you all forever!” , You made my life a living hell!”-Layla screamed to the inmates.

She was finally out, but she was unhappy because she was totally broke and she couldn’t get any job, so she went to the train station to commit suicide, when she was about to throw herself on the tracks, a man grabbed her. He was a farmer of about 60 years and he talked to her and he gave a job to Layla at his farm and she was very happy but the bad luck had just begun...
The farmer only saved her to do the hard work on his farm and he didn’t pay her for her job either. After 7 horrible months, she started having depression, her hair started falling fast and she started having hallucinations and finally she became completely mad. One day when the farmer wanted to command her to do something else, she started laughing hilariously and she took an axe and she stabbed it into her own head and she fell looking to the sky instantly and died.

The farmer was so upset that he couldn’t believe what had happened. After a few years, the farmer died naturally. And that was the tragic end of Layla “The emerald eyed woman”.
If you are looking for a happy ending don’t read this book because your heart won’t take it, a chain of tragic events and one beautiful woman with a destroyed life.

How is she going to end?
